

Jersey Devil

The Jersey Devil (aka Leeds Devil) was thought to be a legendary creature that was said to inhabit the Pine Barrens of Southern New Jersey. Some have been seen as far away as Tir Tangier. It is thought that they can be found anywhere in North America.

This creature is often described as a flying biped with hooves, but there are many variations of this creature. One thing that is always the same is that these creatures should be feared.

The most common description of this creature is that of a kangaroo wyvern (hops to walk like a kangaroo) creature with a goat or horse head, leathery bat wings, horns, small clawed hands, a forked tail, and stands on cloven hooves. It has been reported to move quickly and is often described as emitting a high-pitched "blood-curdling scream"

<It is thought that the first of this creatures was, at first, a free spirit that inhabited the body of one of the Leeds children back in 1796. This 13th child had been cursed by its mother, thus opening it up to being possessed. Now they seem to be creatures like any other.> Dr Critter PHD Parazology.

No one is sure why the first sightings started back in the 1700's (before the return of magic) but this creature is growing in numbers. They are still ultra rare to see, but hunters have taken shots at a few through the years.

<None have been taken yet.> Big Gun Hunter

There is a reason these creatures are called a devil. They are fearsome and dangerous animals. They are so dangerous they are not held in any zoo as of yet. Both the San Diego Zoo and the Prospect Park Zoo in New York have put a 100K¥.

<Trappers and hunters beware, my son lost his life to one of these. We were out hunting one a few years back. They have a fear ability. The fear drove him to make mistakes that got him killed. I wouldn't be here, if it wasn't for the beast leaving the area. I was too terrified to pull the trigger.> -Sad MotherHunter

The Jersey Devil is thought to be a lone hunter. There have been no reported sightings of more than one devil in any area at any time.

<I saw a circle of these beasts chanting in a clearing in the NAN. They were performing some kind of ritual. I hightailed it out of there because I didn't want to be seen.> Scared Rabbit

<How do you know that that was these things?> Skeptic

<The tail. You can't miss it.> Scared Rabbit

Gamemasters Note: In one of my campaigns these creatures are sanciant. They inherently have magic, and are willing to throw spells at runners trying to capture or kill one. They NEVER travel alone, but only one is ever seen.
